Lakhan was married to Savitri in 1940. He was a poor man but by sheer hard work made a fortune. He was blessed with 6 children. 2 daughters married off with handsome dowries and 4 sons- Amar, Bimal, Chander and Deepak. Bimal and Chander had no children and Deepak remained a bachelor. Chander was killed in an accident in 1967. In 1968 his widow in the face of staunch opposition adopted a son, Chandan. The only person who supported her was Bimal. Enraged by Bimal's conduct in betraying family, Deepak unilaterally made a gift of his share in the joint family property to Amar's son and daughter-Ajay and Anuja. He also in a Will bequeathed the property he had acquired of his own efforts to Anuja. He died soon after. Meanwhile relations of Bimal and his wife, who also happened to Amar's wife's sister, got strained. Bimal accused her of being worthless and barren. Enraged she left for her parent's house. Her maid stayed back to pack up her things. Bimal promised to marry with maid, bought some sindoor from the market and applied it on her forehead in front of Pooja room. They lived together until Bimal's death a year later in 1970. Their son Badal was born posthumously two months later. Savitri died in 1971. Lakhan also died in same year. Amar being eldest son takes over as the karta. Fearing of the welfare of their sons, the widows of Chander and Bimal file a suit for partition on behalf of their minor sons claiming their shares and the shares of their sons in the joint family property, the undivided interest of their husbands which had not been given to them and also a share in Lakhan's share. They also challenged the gift and will made by Deepak. Amar, his children and Bimal's first wife claim that neither Chandan nor Badal are sons and that widows had no right to make a claim on their behalf either seeking partition or notional partition. They also challenged the marriage between Bimal and maidservant and deny her a share.

Issues:-

1. Whether plaint is maintainable?
2. Whether adoption of Chandan is valid?
3. Whether Badal can be considered a coparcener for claiming share in undivided property?
4. Whether a widow of Bimal and Chandam has a right to claim a share in undivided property?
