Changing patterns of infectious disease - a challenge to Health-Care Providers

Despite a century of often successful prevention and control efforts, infectious diseases remain an important global problem in public health. Changes in society, technology and the microorganisms themselves are contributing to the emergence of new diseases, the re-emergence of diseases once controlled.

Understanding the nature of COVID-19 from Homoeopathic perspectives

COVID-19 is an acute epidemic disease caused by recurring type of acute miasm (§ 73, Organon of Medicine)

This is a newly emerging complex disease with a natural history that manifests specific clinical phases of progression. Initially conceptualized as a primarily respiratory viral disease posing additional risk to elderly patients with co-morbidities, COVID-19 is now recognized as a more complex, multi-organ and heterogeneous illness than initially anticipated. Patients with COVID-19 display a diverse array Infectious diseases are now emerging or reemerging almost every year. This trend will continue because a number of factors, including the increased global population, aging, changed life style, travel, urbanization, development of new technology and climate change, favor the emergence, evolution and spread of new pathogens.¹ To combat these newly emerging diseases by Homoeopathy, there is a need to find out some suitable effective strategy following homoeopathic principles.

of symptoms and complications, including a hyper-inflammatory state, endothelial dysfunction and thromboembolic disease, neuropsychiatric symptoms and a clinical course that may be complicated by abrupt, unexpected deterioration during apparent recovery.² Various studies reported the recurrence of COVID-19 in various countries.³ All these characteristics of COVID-19 clearly indicate the chronic nature of this disease of miasmatic origin.
